

‘Is responsible recruitment a challenge in the European context?’

Over the last few years the responsible recruitment of workers has received increasing attention from business and governments. To date much of the focus has been on supply chains in the Global South. Risks of exploitation through flawed recruitment processes however can occur anywhere and many companies are becoming aware of risks far closer to home.

Marks & Spencer in partnership with IHRB Leadership Group for Responsible Recruitment and The Consumer Goods Forum, invite you to join them for a discussion on responsible recruitment in Europe.

This business-focussed event will consider:

- Understand the reality and the possible extent of the challenge;
- What it is that makes workers vulnerable;
- How do we extend due diligence to recruitment;
- What do we need to address to deal with possible issues?

A panel of leaders from different industries will share their experience before table discussions allow the chance for a more detailed examination of the key challenges and possible solutions.
